Topic List and Lesson numbers

Level 1 AMAR is composed of roughly 12+ core topics, recorded across 28 videos.

All of the main vocabulary has been compiled into this document. Worksheets are available for most of the foundational lessons; however, for simpler lessons, worksheets have intentionally not been provided to encourage students to develop independence. For more challenging lessons in the future, worksheets will continue to be provided as time permits (Insha'Allah), but this won't be the case for more "simpler" Lessons

How to Study

This revision guide is not intended to replace the lecture recordings. Rather, it is designed to complement them by following these steps:

1. Watch the lecture videos and complete the exercises from within the lecture.
2. After the lecture, read through this revision guide and memorise the key vocabulary (to a strength of 60 - 70%)
3. Move on to the worksheets provided in this booklet, and this will solidify your memory even more
    - Print the sheets out if needed, or write your answers on another piece of paper
4. Along the way, push yourself and immerse yourself into the Arabic language by using other resources, watching Arabic lectures
5. Make Duaa' to remain steadfast, and try your absolute best.
6. Reduce your sins, as sins have an effect on the blessings in our time, and they negatively effect our dedication

This is a 15 month programme. You are being spoon-fed to the best of our ability, so simply put in your all and, inshāʾAllāh, you will soon be able to understand, read, and benefit from the Arabic language with confidence.

1.2 Key Rules

1.2.1 Masculine and Feminine Nouns

In Arabic, every noun is either masculine (مُذَكَّر) or feminine (مُؤَنَّث). Words ending in ـة (Taa Marbuta) are usually feminine and words without it are usually masculine

This rule can be followed for 90% nouns in the Arabic Language. However, there are some exceptions that don't follow this basic rule, so for these terms you must simply memorise whether they are masculine (مُذَكَّر) or feminine (مُؤَنَّث)

However, for body parts, there is another rule to consider. Many feminine words do not have a taa marbūṭah (ة), yet they are still feminine. These words often follow a second pattern: if they come in pairs (i.e. there are two of them in the body), they are most likely feminine.

| Type | Arabic | Pronunciation | English |
|---|---|---|---|
| Masculine | رَأْسٌ | raʾsun | Head |
| | وَجْهٌ | wajhun | Face |
| | أَنْفٌ | anfun | Nose |
| Feminine (ـة) | رُكْبَةٌ | rukbatun | Knee |
| | قَدَمٌ | qadamun | Foot |
| Feminine (exceptions without taa marbuta) | يَدٌ | yadun | Hand |
| | عَيْنٌ | ʿaynun | Eye |
| | أُذُنٌ | udhunun | Ear |

1.2.2 “This is” in the Arabic Language

The reason this is important to know is because Arabic is a gendered language, which means every noun is either masculine or feminine. Because of this, other words in the sentence have to match the noun’s gender.

This matching system is called agreement (المُطَابَقَة - al-muṭābaqah) and Arabic relies on it heavily, unlike some other languages such as English, Mandarin Chinese, or Indonesian.

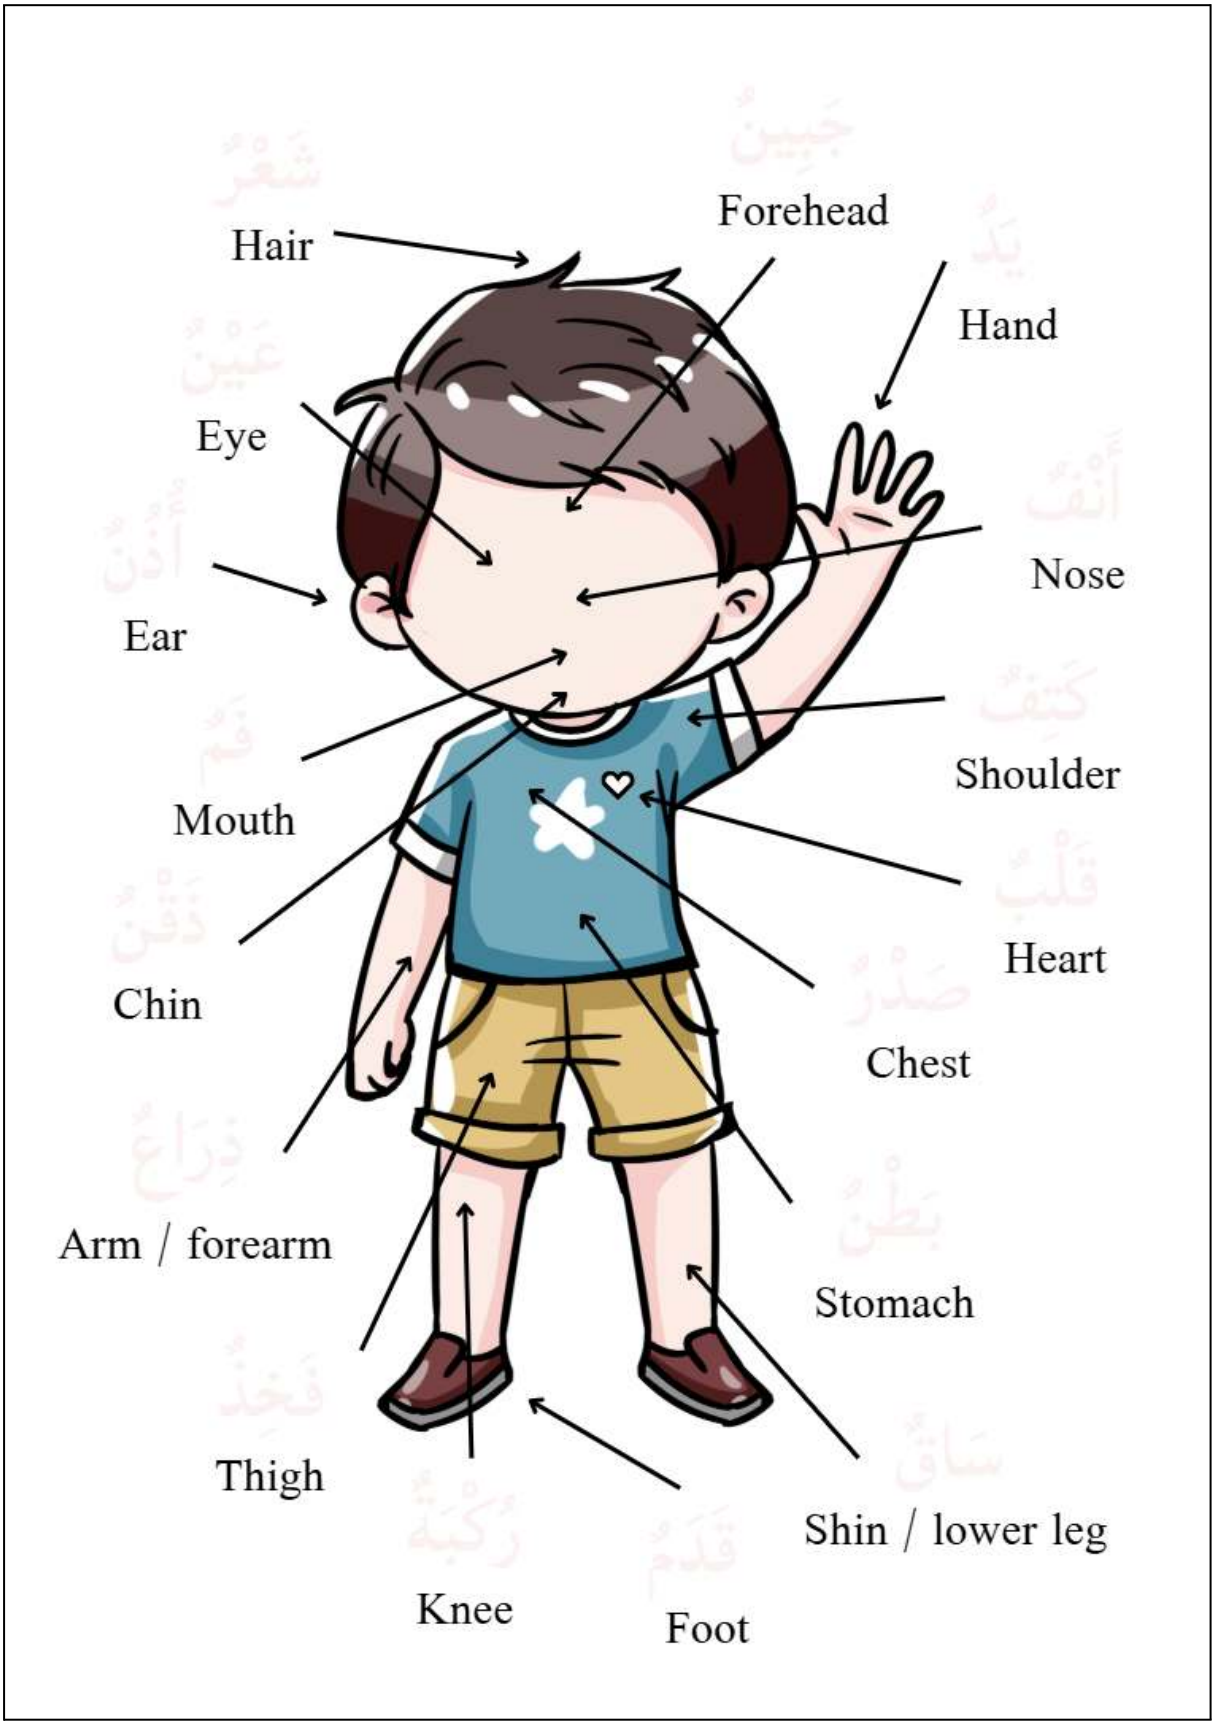

One of the simplest and most important places where this appears is when saying “this is…”. In Arabic, the word for “this” changes depending on whether the noun is masculine or feminine.

- هٰذَا (hādhā) - This is (M): Used with masculine nouns
- هٰذِهِ (hādhihi) - This is (F): Used with feminine nouns

So instead of having just one word for “this,” Arabic requires you to choose the correct form based on the noun.

| Rule | What to Memorise | How It Works | Examples |
|---|---|---|---|
| Masculine = هٰذَا | هٰذَا | Use with masculine nouns | هٰذَا رَأْسٌ - this is a headهٰذَا شَعْرٌ - this is hairهٰذَا وَجْهٌ - this is a faceهٰذَا جَبِينٌ - this is a foreheadهٰذَا حَاجِبٌ - this is an eyebrowهٰذَا أَنْفٌ - this is a noseهٰذَا فَمٌ - this is a mouthهٰذَا لِسَانٌ - this is a tongueهٰذَا ذَقْنٌ - this is a chinهٰذَا كَتِفٌ - this is a shoulderهٰذَا ذِرَاعٌ - this is an armهٰذَا صَدْرٌ - this is a chestهٰذَا قَلْبٌ - this is a heartهٰذَا بَطْنٌ - this is a stomachهٰذَا فَخِذٌ - this is a thigh |
| Feminine = هٰذِهِ | هٰذِهِ | Use with feminine nouns | هٰذِهِ عَيْنٌ - this is an eyeهٰذِهِ أُذُنٌ - this is an earهٰذِهِ أَسْنَانٌ - these are teethهٰذِهِ يَدٌ - this is a handهٰذِهِ رِجْلٌ - this is a legهٰذِهِ رُكْبَةٌ - this is a kneeهٰذِهِ سَاقٌ - this is a shinهٰذِهِ قَدَمٌ - this is a foot |
| Sentence structure | هٰذِهِ / هٰذَا + noun | “This is + noun” | هٰذَا رَأْسٌ - this is a headهٰذِهِ يَدٌ - this is a handهٰذَا قَلْبٌ - this is a heartهٰذِهِ رُكْبَةٌ - this is a knee |

2.1.2 Combined Teens

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| TEENS (11 - 19) | ١١ | أَحَدَ عَشَرَ | aḥada ʿashara | Eleven |
| | ١٢ | اِثْنَا عَشَرَ | ithnā ʿashara | Twelve |
| | ١٣ | ثَلَاثَةَ عَشَرَ | thalāthata ʿashara | Thirteen |
| | ١٤ | أَرْبَعَةَ عَشَرَ | arbaʿata ʿashara | Fourteen |
| | ١٥ | خَمْسَةَ عَشَرَ | khamsata ʿashara | Fifteen |
| | ١٦ | سِتَّةَ عَشَرَ | sittata ʿashara | Sixteen |
| | ١٧ | سَبْعَةَ عَشَرَ | sabʿata ʿashara | Seventeen |
| | ١٨ | ثَمَانِيَةَ عَشَرَ | thamāniyata ʿashara | Eighteen |
| | ١٩ | تِسْعَةَ عَشَرَ | tisʿata ʿashara | Nineteen |

When you add a unit (11–19):

As we can see, here we take the units 1–9 (e.g. Waahid, Ithnaan) that we learnt before, and combine them with the number for ten (ʿAsharah).

However, there are two changes to the terms we learnt before:

- The final letter of the units now take a fatḥah (-َ) instead of a ḍammah (-ُ) (e.g. ثَلَاثَةَ < ثَلَاثَةٌ) - except for 11 and 12 which don't really follow this pattern
- *The term for ten drops the taa marbūṭah (عَشَرَ → عَشَرَةٌ).*

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | If you remember these two rules then you don't have to memorise this table and can simply make it using the fundamentals from the first table | | | |
| COMPOUND TEENS (21 - 99) | ... + ١ | وَاحِدٌ وَ ... | wāḥidun wa | (Twenty - Ninety) one |
| | ... + ٢ | اِثْنَانِ وَ ... | ithnāni wa | (Twenty - Ninety) two |
| | ... + ٣ | ثَلَاثَةٌ وَ ... | thalāthatun wa | (Twenty - Ninety) three |
| | ... + ٤ | أَرْبَعَةٌ وَ ... | arbaʿatun wa | (Twenty - Ninety) four |
| | ... + ٥ | خَمْسَةٌ وَ ... | khamsatun wa | (Twenty - Ninety) five |
| | ... + ٦ | سِتَّةٌ وَ ... | sittatun wa | (Twenty - Ninety six |
| | ... + ٧ | سَبْعَةٌ وَ ... | sabʿatun wa | (Twenty - Ninety) seven |
| | ... + ٨ | ثَمَانِيَةٌ وَ ... | thamāniyatun wa | (Twenty - Ninety) eight |
| | ... + ٩ | تِسْعَةٌ وَ ... | tisʿatun wa | (Twenty - Ninety) nine |
| | When you add a unit: (20–90)20 - 90 terms like 21, 34, 77, 89 are very easy. You simply combine the the units 1–9 (e.g. Waahid, Ithnaan) that we learnt before, and combine them with the terms for ten (Ishrun, Thalathun, Arbaun).There are No Changes to the pronunciationThe only unique thing is that you Add وَ between the unit and the tensTherefore, you don't even have to memorise this table, as long as you memorised the fundamentals, you can make this | | | |

2.1.3 Combined Hudreds

Hundreds such as thalāthu-miʾatun (300), arbaʿu-miʾatun (400), khamsu-miʾatun (500), and the rest are very simple to memorise.

Using this simple concept (300, 400, 500...) and the compound teens before (12, 48, 59...), you can very easily make compound hundreds (e.g. 312, 448, 559) are also straightforward.

Simply split the number into its hundreds and remainder (i.e. The compound teen).

For example, with 348, think of it as: 300 + 48

1. 300 + 48

Then combine each portion in arabic together, but add وَ ("and") after each separation

| 300 | + | 48 |
|---|---|---|
| ثَلَاثُمِائَةٌ | وَ | ثَمَانِيَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَ |

Therefore:

- 348 = ثَلَاثُمِائَةٌ وَثَمَانِيَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَ (thalāthu-miʾatun wa thamāniyatun wa arbaʿūna)

Overall, it is nothing complicated, you just combine the Hundreds with the compound Teens

2.1.4 Combined Thousands

Combined Thousands (E.g. 1024) are no different to the Combined Hundreds and Teens, all you have to do is add more layers, but the process is same

So first you memorise thousands such as alfun (1000), alfāni (2000), thalāthatu ālāfin (3000), arbaʿatu ālāfin (4000), khamsatu ālāfin (5000)

Using this simple concept (1000, 2000, 3000...) and the compound hundreds before (312, 448, 559...), you can very easily make compound thousands (e.g. 1,312, 4,448, 5,559).

Simply imagine the number to be split up

For example, with 1,348, think of it as:

1. 1000 + 348 or
2. 1000 + 300 + 48

Then combine each portion in arabic together, but add وَ ("and") after each separation

| 1000 | + | 300 | + | 48 (In arabic we say 8 first then 40) |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| أَلْفٌ | وَ | ثَلَاثُمِائَةٌ | وَ | ثَمَانِيَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَ |

Overall, it is nothing complicated. Just as compound hundreds are made by combining the hundreds with the compound teens, compound thousands are made by combining the thousands with the compound hundreds.

2.2 Summary of Rules

You must memorise all the key numbers (i.e. vocabulary) from the table, which includes the basic units (1–9) and the number 10, which is used to form the teens (11–19). You must also memorise the tens (20, 30, 40...90) and the hundreds (100, 200, 3000...2000).

Once you know these round numbers, you can form all other numbers between these ranges by applying a small set of rules.

| Rule No. | Section | Rule | Example |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Compound Numbers (21–99) | Unit + وَ + tenالوحدة + وَ + العشرات | Example (21):• Unit = وَاحِدٌ• And = وَ• Ten = عِشْرُونَ= Together: وَاحِدٌ + وَ + عِشْرُونَSo 21 is:وَاحِدٌ وَعِشْرُونَwāḥidun wa-ʿishrūna |
| 2 | Hundreds (300–900) | Unit + Hundredالوحدة + مِائَةNote: The unit will drop its taa marbuta (ةٌ) in this case and take a dhamma | Example (300):• Unit = ثَلَاثُ (instead of the usual: ثَلَاثَةُ)• Hundred = مِائَة= Together: ثَلَاثُ + مِائَةSo 300 is:ثَلَاثُمِائَةٌthalāthumiʾatun (not thalathatuiʾatun)Note: It is better to just memorise these |
| 3 | Compound Hundreds (101–999) | Hundreds + وَ + remaining numberالمئات + وَ + العدد المتبقي | Example (348):• Hundreds = ثَلَاثُمِائَةٌ• And = وَ• Remaining = ثَمَانِيَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَ= Together: ثَلَاثُمِائَةٌ + وَ + ثَمَانِيَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَSo 348 is:ثَلَاثُمِائَةٌ وَثَمَانِيَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَthalāthumiʾatun wa-thamāniyatun wa-arbaʿūna |
| 4 | Thousands (3000–9000) | Unit + Thousandsآلاف + الوحدة | Example (3000):• Unit = ثَلَاثَةُ• Thousands = آلاف= Together: ثَلَاثَةُ + آلافSo 3000 is:ثَلَاثَةُ آلافthalāthatu ālāf |

|---|---|---|---|
| 5 | Compound Thousands (1000 and above) | Thousands + وَ + Hundreds + وَ + (Unit + وَ + tens)الآلاف + وَ + المئات + وَ + (الوحدة + وَ + العشرات) | Example (2345):• Thousands = أَلْفَانِ• And = وَ• Hundreds = ثَلَاثُ مِائَةٍ• And = وَ• Remaining = خَمْسَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَ= Together: أَلْفَانِ + وَ + ثَلَاثُ مِائَةٍ + وَ + خَمْسَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَSo 2345 is:أَلْفَانِ وَثَلَاثُ مِائَةٍ وَخَمْسَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَalfāni wa-thalāthu miʾatin wa-khamsatun wa-arbaʿūna |

Topic 9: Nouns in the Classroom – أَسْمَاءُ حُجْرَةِ الدِّرَاسَةِ

9.1 Introduction to Plurals and their types

In Arabic, nouns can be either singular (one) or plural (more than one), and forming the plural is not always done in the same way. Unlike English, where you often just add “-s,” Arabic has different systems for making words plural. Some words follow clear and easy rules, while others change internally and must be learned through patterns.

That is why in the Vocabulary table, you can regonise some patterns, and in other words there is “suddenly” no pattern. This is because some words have rules and others don’t when it comes to making plirals

The table below shows the main ways plurals are formed in Arabic, along with examples.

| Type | How to form it | Rule | Example (Arabic) | Meaning |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Sound plural (masculine) | add ـونَ (ūna) | Used for male people / groups | مُدَرِّس (mudarris) → مُدَرِّسُونَ (mudarrisūn) | teacher/ teachers |
| Sound plural (feminine) | add ـات (āt) | Used for feminine nouns & many objects | مَكْتَبَة (maktabah) → مَكْتَبَات (maktabāt) | library/ libraries |
| Broken plural | change inside the word | NO single rule so you must simply memorise the words | قَلَم (qalam) → أَقْلَام (aqlām)دَرْس (dars) → دُرُوس (durūs) | pen/penslesson/ lessons |

Topic 10: Verbs in the Classroom – الأفعال في حُجْرَةِ الدِّرَاسَةِ

10.1 Introducing Verbs

10.11 The Verbal Noun

To make verbs in Arabic, you need to understand the concept of the Maṣdar (مَصْدَر). This concept is not a tense, but it is usually discussed along with the tenses

This concept is basically the action or word itself, without any tense involved. It literally represents the base idea of an action before it is placed into a tense or attached to a person.

From this action/root idea, different verb forms can then be built based on the tenses

For example:

- كِتَابَة (kitābah): “writing”
- دِرَاسَة (dirāsah): “studying”

These two words are currently, representing the action itself, in Arabic, this is known as a Masdar. For example “Writing is Fun”, here “Writing” is a noun, as you haven’t attached this noun to someone doing it, only then it would become a verb (Fi’l), which is studied under the tenses

10.12 The three Tenses

After understanding the Maṣdar, you can then begin understanding how verbs are built from the same action/root idea.

The difference between the Maṣdar and the Fiʿl (verb) in these tenses is that the Maṣdar represents the action on its own, without being attached to a person or time. The Fiʿl, however, takes that same action and attributes it to someone and a tense. So instead of simply “writing”, it becomes “he wrote”, “he writes”, or “write!”.

There are three tenses in Arabic:

| Arabic term | Transliteration | Meaning | Explanation |
|---|---|---|---|
| مَاضٍ | māḍin | past tense | Used for actions that already happened |
| مُضَارِع | muḍāriʿ | present/future tense | Used for actions happening now or in the future |
| أَمْر | amr | command form / imperative | Used for giving commands |

This is similar in number to english, because we know that In English, verbs are also divided into 3 main tenses with even around 4 subcategories each making it a total of 12 tenses

1. Past
    - “he wrote” (simple past)
    - “he was writing” (past continuous)
    - “he had written” (past perfect)
    - “he had been writing” — past perfect continuous
2. Present
    - “he writes” (simple present)
    - “he is writing” (present continuous)
    - “he has written” (present perfect)
    - “he has been writing” — present perfect continuous
3. Future
    - “he will write” (simple future)
    - “he will be writing” (future continuous)
    - “he will have written” (future perfect)
    - “he will have been writing” — future perfect continuous

The main difference between the English tenses and Arabic tenses is that, English looks at the “time of that action compared to the current time”. In other words, If the action is complete and not currently happening, it is Past

If it is currently happening it is Present

If it is has not happened, but it will happen later on, then it is Future

If you look carefully, you will notice that these same actions, instead of categorising them based on “current time”, we can also categorise them based on whether they are completed or not

For example, the Past is something that has already happened, so this is complete. The Present is something that is currently happening, however it has still not bene completed, and if it was completed it would have been past by definition. As the present is still happening, it is therefore incomplete. Lastly the Future tense, it has not happened already, nor is it happening right now, rather it is going to happen, so that is also incomplete

So as you can see, the same three english tenses of Past, Present, Future can also be categorised into Completed Tenses and Incomplete Tenses

1. Completed Tenses:
    a) The Past Tense
2. Incomplete Tenses
    b) The Present Tense
    c) The Future Tense

Now, this is exactly what Arabic is, it has these three tenses, but categorised from a different angle, Completed (Paste Tense) and Incomplete Tenses (The Present/Future Tense):

1. مَاضٍ (māḍī): The Past tense
2. مُضَارِع (muḍāriʿ): The Present/Future tense

However, Arabic introduces a 3rd “tense” to its set of two, and this is known as the Command. So from an english perspective it would be the fourth one of the english three tenses:

1. The Past Tense
2. The Present Tense
3. The Future Tense
4. + The Command Form

From the actual Arabic categorisation it would be the third of three categories (As the Present and Future come under one category):

1. مَاضٍ (māḍī): The Past tense
2. مُضَارِع (muḍāriʿ): The Present/future tense
3. أَمْر (amr): The Command

The command form is less of a “tense”; rather, it is a verb “form” or “mood” (the way a verb is used to express a purpose or function) used to give commands, instructions, or requests.

The rules, on making verbs within these tenses are discussed later in section “11.1 Formulation Verbs”, for now you should continue reading in order

The words in this table are currently shown in their base grammatical person/form. For example, most of the Māḍī (Past) and Muḍāriʿ (Present/Future) verbs are shown in the 3rd person masculine singular form ("he did"), while the Amr (Command) verbs are shown in the 2nd person masculine singular form ("you do!").

If you want to change any of these words into different grammatical persons, you must refer back to the relevant conjugation section and tables for that tense/form.

| سَمَاوِي (samāwī) | سَمَاوِيَّة (samāwiyyah) | sky blue |

In Arabic, colours usually act like adjectives. This means the colour word must match the noun it is describing. The adjective matches the noun in gender (masculine or feminine), number (singular or plural), and definiteness (whether the word has “the” or not).

For example, the word قَمِيص (qamīṣ – shirt) is masculine, so you would say:

- قَمِيص أَحْمَر (qamīṣ aḥmar) – “a red shirt”

But the word سَيَّارَة (sayyārah – car) is feminine, so the colour also changes to the feminine form:

- سَيَّارَة حَمْرَاء (sayyārah ḥamrāʾ) – “a red car”

So in simple terms:

- masculine nouns use masculine colours,
- feminine nouns use feminine colours.

BONUS LESSONS

UNOFFICIAL

Bonus Lessons (★)

Bonus Lessons are unofficial and not taught literally by Ustaadh

My aim is to stick as closely as possible to the lecture material taught by Ustaadh. However, if I personally feel that some areas would benefit from extra explanation, detail, or additional beneficial concepts at that stage, then I may create a Bonus Lesson.

Students who prefer to study only the material directly covered in class can simply ignore the following Bonus Lessons.

All Bonus Lessons will be clearly marked with a (★) symbol, while the normal numbered lessons will continue to follow the class content closely.

Bonus Lesson A (★): Pronouns – الضَّمَائِر

A1.1 Reminder to Students

Ustaadh briefly mentioned some pronouns throughout Lessons 7, and he will continue to introduce more over the course of the Lessons. However, instead of leaving them scattered around different pages, I decided to gather the already covered ones together into this bonus lesson.

I have classed this as a Bonus lesson because I have not stuck to the Lesson, rather I have also add many of the other common forms which were not fully covered in class, but will likely be covered in future, I have included them here aswell

Most of this lesson is therefore bonus content that is unofficial, but I feel these forms are very useful, especially at this stage for understanding the upcoming lessons on classroom items and basic sentence structures.

Students should try to push themselves a little further and benefit from learning these extra forms if possible. However, if you would prefer to stick only to the material directly covered by Ustaadh, then you can simply skip this bonus lesson and continue following the normal numbered lessons instead.

A1.2 Introduction to Grammatical Persons

Arabic suffixes and prefixes revolve around three different perspectives: 1st, 2nd, and 3rd person. These “Persons” are based on the relationship of the speaker to those being spoken to/about.

So this is not related to the number of people, nor the number of those speaking, rather it is only related to who is being addressed, yourself or someone else

- 1st person: The speaker is talking about themselves
- 2nd person: The speaker is talking about a person directly to that same person (i.e. face to face)
- 3rd person: The speaker is talking about a person, to someone else (e.g. backchatting)

These must be understood before reading any tables relating to pronouns and verb forms. If you do not understand the concept of 1st, 2nd, and 3rd person, then you should first refer to Bonus Lessons 12–15, Section 13.1: “Grammatical Persons”, where this concept is explained in more detail.

If you already know this concept properly, then you can simply move forwards and read the tables regarding Pronouns and Demonstratives etc, and these will greatly improve your conversational skills, including your “getting to know each other” skills

A1.3 Vocabulary (Pronouns)

A1.31 Introduction

In Arabic, there are two main types of pronouns: ‘Independent (Detached) Pronouns’ and ‘Attached Pronouns’.

1. Independent (Detached) Pronouns: These are used to show your identity. Use these when you are explaining who or what someone is (e.g., I am a teacher — أَنَا مُدَرِّسٌ). They can also be used to clarify a relationship between things by identifying the person involved (e.g., I am the owner — أَنَا الصَّاحِبُ).
2. Attached Pronouns: These are used to show your possession/relationship to nouns (e.g., My book — كِتَابِي), to show your relationship to an action/verb (e.g., he saw me — رَآنِي), to show your relationship to a preposition (e.g., Obligatory upon him — عَلَيْهِ), or to show your relationship to a particle (e.g., Indeed he is successful — إِنَّهُ نَاجِحٌ).

In this Bonus lesson, we are going to list all the (1) Independent Pronouns, so you can talk about yourself in a conversation, we will also go through (2) Attached Pronouns, but only those to do with nouns, so you can talk about classroom items and your belongings when having conversations about your belongings and other people's belongings

As a reminder, this table in above is the Attached Pronoun list to show your relationship and possession of nouns (e.g., their book, my book, his book). This specific table is not for showing the relationship between verbs.

An attached pronoun table also exists for verbs aswell, and that verb table "steals" some similar suffixes, so you may get confused, however you need to remember that there are attached pronoun tables for nouns (E.g. My book, your book) and the relationship to them and a separate table for verbs and the relationship to them (e.g. I saw, you saw). You can find the breakdown of those verb attached pronouns later on in Section 11.2.

| Plural (near) | هَؤُلَاءِ | hāʾulāʾ | these | Speaking about a group of people that are close by | هَٰؤُلَاءِ قَوْمِي (hāʾulāʾ qawmī) – “These are my people” (11:78) |
| Plural (far) | أُولَٰئِكَ | ulāʾika | those | Speaking about a group of people that are far away | أُولَٰئِكَ المُفْلِحُونَ (ulāʾika al-mufliḥūn) – “Those are the successful” (2:5) |

In Arabic, demonstratives (أَسْمَاء الإِشَارَة, asmāʾ al-ishārah) are words used to point to things, similar to “this,” “that,” “these,” and “those” in English. They help you identify which object or person you are talking about.

For example, هَذَا (hādhā) – “this” and ذَلِكَ (dhālika) – “that” are both demonstratives, but they differ based on distance.

Arabic demonstratives are organized mainly by two ideas:

1. How many things you are referring to (singular, dual, or plural)
2. How far they are (near or far) in physical distance or in honourable status

Arabic also has a special form for exactly two items, called the dual, such as هَذَانِ (hādhāni) – “these two” and ذَانِكَ (dhānika) – “those two”. Although dual forms are less common in everyday speech, they are an important part of the language and appear in classical Arabic.

Like pronouns, demonstratives must agree with what they refer to, especially in terms of number and sometimes gender

Bonus Lesson C (★): Verb Conjugation by Grammatical Person – تَصْرِيفُ الأَفْعَالِ حَسَبَ الضَّمَائِرِ

C1.1 The Grammatical Persons

We learnt what the Masdar is and the three tenses, and we took many basic verb forms, and they were mainly in the form of “He did x” etc, so it was related to the Male

However, we may want to talk about many other people, if that is the case, you should then learn the Grammatical Persons, and after that, you should learn the different prefixes and suffixes for each grammatical person. Once you complete this, you will be able to use verbs and tenses correctly for men, women, groups of people, and the different Arabic pronouns.

Firstly, you need to remember that there are three different perspectives: 1st, 2nd, and 3rd person are based on the relationship of the speaker to those being spoken to/about. So the stage of “person” is not related to the number of people, nor the number of those speaking, rather it is only related to who is being addressed, yourself or someone else

- 1st person: The speaker is talking about themselves
- 2nd person: The speaker is talking about a person directly to that same person
- 3rd person: the speaker is talking about a person, to someone else

On the other hand we can also address one person or many people

- Singular: Addressing one person
- Dual: Addressing exactly two people
- Plural: Addressing a group of three or more

Lastly, we could be speaking to about two genders (The speaker’s gender is irrelevant, only those being spoken to/about are relevant)

- Males
- Females

When we put these together these three concepts together, the perspectives, the number of those being spoken to, and the gender of the people we are speaking to, in the end we get 14 categories of “Grammatical Persons”

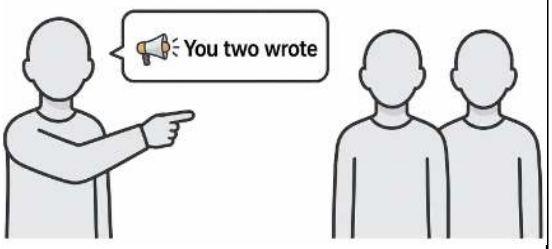

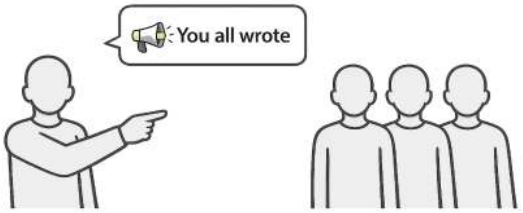

1. 1st person singular — I
2. 1st person plural — We
3. 2nd person masculine singular — You (male)
4. 2nd person feminine singular — You (female)
5. 2nd person dual — You two
6. 2nd person masculine plural — You all (males)
7. 2nd person feminine plural — You all (females)
8. 3rd person masculine singular — He
9. 3rd person feminine singular — She
10. 3rd person masculine dual — They two (males)
11. 3rd person feminine dual — They two (females)

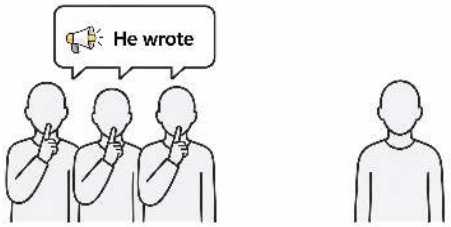

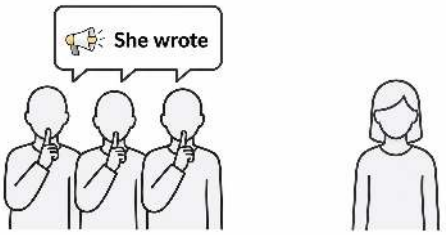

12. 3rd person masculine plural — They (males)
13. 3rd person feminine plural — They (females)

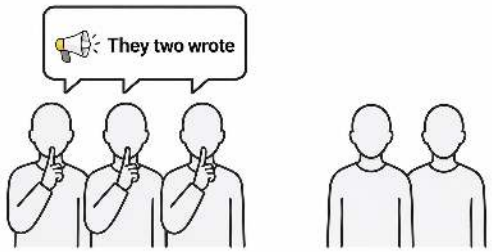

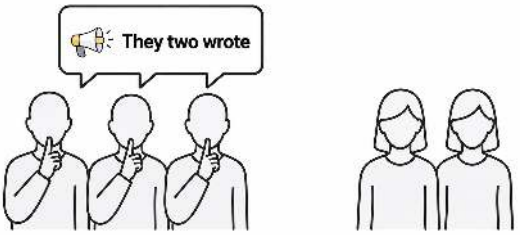

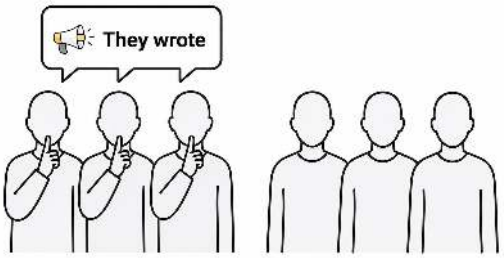

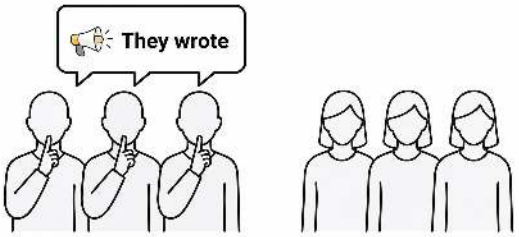

It is important to know what all these english terms mean, because when we go on to learn the relevant Arabic terms, you will not understand them if in the first place you don't even understand the English terms

| 1st Person (Talking about Yourself) | Singular |  | one person talking about themselves |

Now that you understand the Arabic Tenses, and you understand the 14 Grammatical Perspetcives/Persons, you can then understand all the Arabic methods of making a word Past Tense (Māḍī) and Present / Future tense (Muḍāriʿ)

C1.2 The Method of forumlating Verbs

C1.21 Past Tense (Māḍī)

The first of the three tenses is the Past Tense (Māḍī). To make something in this form, you take a root (e.g. ك-ت-ب k-t-b, related to writing), you then usually add Fathas to each letter and pronounce the letters together, so from the root you get the word كَتَبَ (kataba). This is now in the past tense form on its own, just by doing this procedure.

You can do this to any word:

1. We want to say “he studied”, so we get the root د-ر-س (d-r-s), we then add fatḥas, and it becomes دَرَسَ (darasa).
2. We want to say “he sat”, so we get the root ج-ل-س (j-l-s), we then add fatḥas, and it becomes جَلَسَ (jalasa).

You then add prefixes depending on which of the 14 Grammatical Persons you want to refer to

| Category | Pattern Rule | Pattern Example | Arabic Example | Pronunciation | English |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Base form | (root) + ـَ | ك-ت-ب + ـَ | كَتَبَ | kataba (m) | he wrote |
| 1st person singular | (root) + تُ | ك-ت-ب + تُ | كَتَبْتُ | katabtu (m/f) | I wrote |
| 1st person plural | (root) + نَا | ك-ت-ب + نَا | كَتَبْنَا | katabnā (m/f) | we wrote |
| 2nd person singular | (root) + تَ | ك-ت-ب + تَ | كَتَبْتَ | katabta (m) | you wrote |
| | (root) + تِ | ك-ت-ب + تِ | كَتَبْتِ | katabti (f) | you wrote |
| 2nd person plural | (root) + تُمْ | ك-ت-ب + تُمْ | كَتَبْتُمْ | katabtum (m) | you (all) wrote |
| | (root) + تُنَّ | ك-ت-ب + تُنَّ | كَتَبْتُنَّ | katabtunna (f) | you (all) wrote |
| 3rd person singular | (root) + تْ | ك-ت-ب + تْ | كَتَبَتْ | katabat (f) | she wrote |
| | (root) + وا | ك-ت-ب + وا | كَتَبُوا | katabū (m) | they wrote |
| 3rd person plural | (root) + نَ | ك-ت-ب + نَ | كَتَبْنَ | katabna (f) | they wrote |

C1.22 Present / Future tense (Muḍāriʿ)

The second of the three tenses is the Present/Future tense (Muḍāriʿ). To make something in this form, you take a root (e.g. ك-ت-ب k-t-b, related to writing) and make the base form, which is يَكْتُبُ (yaktubu).

In regards to the Harkaat you put on the base, there isn't one set rule, unlike in the past tense where we said that in most cases you can usually add a fatha–fatha–fatha to the base. On the other hand, for the Mudari', tere are up to 10 + combination of Harakats discussed under concept of Awzān (أَوْزَان), which is a topic for another day. However, the most common are three:

1. يَفْعُلُ (sukūn – dammah – ḍammah)
2. يَفْعِلُ (sukūn – kasrah – ḍammah)
3. يَفْعَلُ (sukūn – fatḥa – ḍammah)

Regardless, when you do get the root you need (which you usually need to memorise), you then add prefixes and suffixes depending on which of the 14 Grammatical Persons you want to refer to

|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Base form | يَ + (root) | يَ + ك-ت-ب | يَكْتُبُ | yaktubu (m) | he writes |
| 1st person singular | أَ + (root) | أَ + ك-ت-ب | أَكْتُبُ | aktubu (m/f) | I write |
| 1st person plural | نَ + (root) | نَ + ك-ت-ب | نَكْتُبُ | naktubu (m/f) | we write |
| 2nd person singular | تَ + (root) | تَ + ك-ت-ب | تَكْتُبُ | taktubu (m) | you write |
| | تَ + (root) + ينَ | تَ + ك-ت-ب + ينَ | تَكْتُبِينَ | taktubīna (f) | you write |
| 2nd person plural | تَ + (root) + ونَ | تَ + ك-ت-ب + ونَ | تَكْتُبُونَ | taktubūna (m) | you (all) write |
| | تَ + (root) + نَ | تَ + ك-ت-ب + نَ | تَكْتُبْنَ | taktubna (f) | you (all) write |
| 3rd person singular | تَ + (root) | تَ + ك-ت-ب | تَكْتُبُ | taktubu (f) | she writes |
| | يَ + (root) + ونَ | يَ + ك-ت-ب + ونَ | يَكْتُبُونَ | yaktubūna (m) | they write |
| 3rd person plural | يَ + (root) + نَ | يَ + ك-ت-ب + نَ | يَكْتُبْنَ | yaktubna (f) | they write |

C1.23 Command (Amr)

The third of the three tenses/forms is the Command (Amr) form. To make something in this form, you take a root (e.g. ك-ت-ب k-t-b, related to writing), then usually add an alif with a ḍammah at the beginning and adjust the vowel pattern. For example:

- اُكْتُبْ → ك-ت-ب (uktub) — “Write!”

Then, depending on which of the 5 grammatical persons you want to refer to, you change the suffix you add.

| Category | Pattern Rule | Pattern Example | Arabic Example | Pronunciation | English |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Base command form | root + ْ | اُكْتُبْ | اُكْتُبْ | uktub | write! |
| 2nd person masculine singular | base form | اُكْتُبْ | اُكْتُبْ | uktub | write! |
| 2nd person feminine singular | base + ي | اُكْتُبْ + ي | اُكْتُبِي | uktubī | write! |
| 2nd person dual | base + ا | اُكْتُبْ + ا | اُكْتُبَا | uktubā | write, you two! |
| 2nd person masculine plural | base + وا | اُكْتُبْ + وا | اُكْتُبُوا | uktubū | write, all of you! |
| 2nd person feminine plural | base + نَ | اُكْتُبْ + نَ | اُكْتُبْنَ | uktubna | write, all of you! |

There are not 14 grammatical persons for this form. The command form (أَمْر — amr) only exists for the 2nd person, because a command can only be given to someone you are speaking directly to. In other words, commands are naturally directed at “you”. For example:

- “Write!”
- “Sit!”
- “Study!”

There is no true 1st person command form (“I write!”), because you cannot really command yourself grammatically. If you say “I will write” or “I should write”, you are simply making a statement, intention, or decision — not giving yourself a command.

Likewise, there is no true 3rd person command form (“He write!”), because you cannot directly command someone you are only talking about. If the person is not being directly addressed, then it is no longer a true command form. Instead, Arabic uses different sentence structures for meanings like “Let him write” or “Tell him to write”.
